Effectively Leading Remote Teams

Synopsis
Overnight we have all become managers of remote teams. At this unprecedented moment in time we must learn to lead in a different way. As the rules for how we do things are rapidly rewritten, this workshop will help you with the practical steps you need to take to build trust and improve the levels of productivity of your team while working remotely.

“I’d always thought of accountability as something that needed to be imposed. Now, I understood that real, effective accountability comes from within.”

Outcomes:

- Know how to demonstrate compassion, create connection and generate a sense of togetherness
- Be able to set clear expectations and bring a new structure to your team to aid decision making and productivity
- Be more intentional about how you communicate to and engage with your team
- Create accountability that comes from within your team members
- Learn to take some risks with how you do things and consciously test, learn and adapt
