

UK GDPR for Managers: Getting to Grips with the Law

Implementing and maintaining a data protection compliance program can be an onerous task. The laws and guidance run to hundreds of pages and set out a number of general principles that must be met alongside much more detailed and specific requirements. Most organisations recognise that data protection compliance is a high-risk issue but have limited resources and expertise to devote to it.

This course is designed to guide your senior management team through the key requirements and provide a compliance planning template that you can follow to build a tailored compliance program and effectively manage risk for your organisation.
